Cambridge, Mass., June 25.-Harvard class day passed off without any great mishaps. The exer-cises in Sanders Theatre were above the usual and the oration of J. F. Brice was the hit statue was nothing to be proud of, but at the same time it is a move in the development of some new idea to take the place of the once famous tree exercises. It is clear that some sort of programme to be carried out around the statue of John Haryard must be appropriate, and the duty of future elass day committees wil be to find a programme that will be effective as well. The throwing of lowers taken from the base of the statue does no m a bad idea, and in practice it worked well but there is a considerable doubt as to the wisdom of having the audience throw colored confetti on

Likewise the idea of having the graduates on hand plan will eventually be formulated by which the reception of the seniors into the midst of the This year the exercises were an improvement upon those of last class day, when the statue was first used, and there can be no doubt that future years will bring more improvement.

The ninety-second season of the Pierian Sodality as an independent "amateur musical organization" will open next October, and several changes in the gorlety's organization have been determined upon. The usual spring series of concerts in Sanders Theatre will be given up, and in their place three concerts will be given up, and in their place three concerts will be given, one in December, one in April and one in May. At these an effort will be made to give more of the popular music, and at the end of the season a concert open to all members of the university will be given. The society will next year rehearse weekly in Holden Chapel, which is to be given over to the musical department under Professor Paine.

Great improvement has seen made in the arrangement of the trophy room in the Hemenway Gymnasium. Professor Archibald C. Coolidge has had charge of the matter, and he has recovered many of the photographs of past winning athletic teams. The room was opened on class day for the inspection of graduates and undergraduates, and it was one of the most interesting things to be seen about the college.

At the annual meeting of the Associate Alumnion Wednesday an elaborate report of the Committee was authorized to push the project. A resolution was passed approving of the establishment of 'The Cornell Alumni News.' Miss Ruth Putnam and Colonel Henry W. Sackett were declared elected as alumni trustees, succeeding John De Witt Warner and Miss Martha. Providence, R. I., June 25.-Undoubtedly the most remarkable commencement week in the history of Brown University has just come to an end. On Monday the graduating class of the Women's College added a new feature to the commencement week festivities, in the form of semi-public "Ivy Day" exercises. The speakers were Miss Evelyn Olive Johnson, the president of the class; Miss Mary Greene Wilbur, Miss Helen Louise Given, Miss Lillian Gertrude McQuillin, and L. F. Snow, the dean of the college. The planting of the class ivy proved to be not an imitation of the men's s day, but a distinctive and highly attractive In the evening the young women entertained their friends with a reception and a dance at Pembroke Hail. He displayed such an appreciation of the situation He displayed such an appreciation of the situation which confronts him as no one would have expected so new a comer to possess. In summing up the needs of the college and the duties of the alumni, the corporation and the faculty, and in his tribute of praise to his Aima Mater, he spoke with rare skill and eloquence. He addressed the largest body of Brown alumni ever gathered together, and he held the attention and sympathy of every individual in his audience from his first word to his last, if, when he rose to speak, there were any who doubted the wisdom of the corporation's choice, their doubts were completely dispelled pefore he sat down.

At the annual meeting of the corporation on Thursday, H. Kirke Porter, of Plitsburg, was elected a fellow of the university, and C. G. King, of Cleveland, and H. M. King, Stephen O. Yellow Springs, Ohio, June 25.-At the commence ment of Antioch College last week the trustees voted to add to the present electives in the college technical courses of instruction and to establish a new department, to be known as "The Horace Mann Teachers' College," with a three years' course, parallel with the first three years of the This teachers' college will not be nother normal school, but will have a high standard of admission, and its courses of instruction will be similar to those in the Teachers College of Coard of admission, and its contests of college of Columbia University. There are in the State of Ohlo upward of twenty thousand teachers in public and private schools and academies of the State, and, while there are two very good normal schools in the State, there is no institution in Ohlo or any of the adjacent States which corresponds to the Teachers College. The name of the man department comes most naturally, because of the fact that Horace Mann was one of the founders of the college, was its first president, and gave the last years of his life to the work of education at Antioch, as a centre of influence in the great States of the upper Mississippi Valley.

Professor Franklin W. Hooper, director of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, was four years a student at Antioch College, and is thoroughly interested in his Alma Mater. He was elected vice-president of the corporation and chairman of the Committee on the Organization of the Horace Mann Teachers' College, He will co-operate with President Bell in the new field of work on which the college is now entering.

Schenectady, N. Y., June 25.-Regular work at Union ended on Friday, and active preparations are now being made for the 10th commencement. The Cuban Educational Association, of which General Joseph Wheeler is president and Gilbert K. Hanonn is secretary, has recently sent to Union three Cubans and three Porto Ricans. They are to be taught English during the summer, and is the three Cubans and three Porto Ricans. They are to be taught English during the summer, and in the fail will enter Union, money scholarships having been granted them. One of the Cubans, Labas Menesse y Comas, was a captain and aide-de-camp to General Maceo until the latter's death, when he held the same position under General Garcia.

Berea, Ky., June 25.-Commencement occasions at Berea College, in the mountains of Eastern Kenucky, are of a popular nature. This year, on the closing day, more than six thousand people were in attendance, and fifteen hundred saddle horses were picketed on the college grounds. The principal ad-dress was by Dr. W. W. Atterbury, of New-York. The day before, William B. Smith, of Richmond, Ky., addressed the literary societies on "Good Citi-zenship."

Among the new instructors appointed for next year is John T. White, a young Tennesseean, recently graduated from Illinois College.

The "extension work" for this summer is in charge of C. Rexford Raymond. A new agency in this line is a weekly paper, "The Citizen," which will contain special departments on home, school and farm, and will exert an influence against the feuds so prevalent in the mountains, and the Mormon missionaries, who are beginning to work in this region.

The college is making progress toward securing an endowment fund, but it is now in great need of funds for current expenses, especially for the extension work which must be done during the period of good roads this summer.

Brunswick, Me., June 25.-President Hyde in his report for 1898-'39 devotes considerable space to the subject of degrees, especially to those of B. S. and

Four years ago the substitution of modern language, or science and mathematics, for Greek in the requirements for admission to college was permitted on condition that those who did not take Greek should receive the degree of B. S. or B. L., instead of the degree of A. B. The establishment of these degrees was adopted as a compromise measure. I recommend the reconsideration of the vote by which these inappropriate degrees were established.

vote by which these inappropriate degrees were established.

The practice of granting the degree of A. B. without Greek is rapidly spreading. The Commissioner of Education reports that lit colleges and universities in the United States confer the degree of A. B. without requiring Greek. Among these and Cornell. Greek is simply one of many studies which are desirable elements of a liberal education. The degree of B. L. is a distinctly inferior degree. The degree of B. S. as given elsewhere is either greatly superior or greatly inferior to the degree proposed to be given here; and in either case is inappropriate. To give either of these degrees to graduates of Bowdoin College. Is to place those graduates below the educational level to which their work justly entitles them; to lower the standing of the college in educational circles and to pitch our camp on the ground which the best institutions either have left or are about to leave.

BACCALAUREATES AT UNIVERSITIES AND COLLEGES.

DR. DWIGHT PREACHES FOR THE LAST TIME PRESIDENT OF YALE.

New-Haven, Conn., June 25.-Dr. Timothy Dwight, the retiring president of Yale University, to-day preached his last baccalaureate sermon before the graduating classes of the academic and scientific departments. The service was rendered the more interesting as the occasion was also the fiftieth anniversary of President Dwight's own graduation. A number of classmates were present. The grad-uating class occupied the greater part of the body of Battell Chapel. All of them were the academic robe, and the scene was one long to be remembered.

A remarkable tribute of respect and affection for the venerable president was witnessed when, imthe entire body of students turned instinctively toward the central aisle, through which the pressident passes out of the church, and acknowledged his farewell with silent and dignified bowing. President Dwight was noticeably affected, and the hushed audience was deeply impressed.

President Dwight's sermon was based on the words of the 65th Psaim. "Thou makest the outgoings of the morning and evening to rejoice." His sermon was a simple one, it evidently being his desire to express in a way that was personal his deep sensibility of the fatherhood of God, and he said he looked back over his own history and was moved to express his gratitude, "for," said he, "I see evidences there of the existence of a loving Father's care and leading. I want no evidence that does not belong to my own life to make clear to me the existence of a Father and a God.

The sermon was devoted to the development of the thought that life is a constant growth from youth and immaturity to old age. He compared the course of life to a long and bright summer's day, which in successive periods gradually and eventually changes. His own time of life, he said, was the late afternoon. The uncertainties that face the youth leaving college change to the stern realities that confront the man of affairs, and these in turn change to success and achievements. To the old man, who has run his course, comes the reward of a life well spent. In this period the sweetness of the memory of a successful life and conscientious striving for the supreme good cheers the old man in his sunset hour. This the preacher declared to he the happiest and richest period of man's earth; career, and the fact that with advancing years man does not feel anything except young, he believed to be an evidence of immortality.

His address was largely of a retrospective and personal nature, and embodied the principles which he has often repeated to the classes which have last occasion of his meeting the student body as university preacher to set before them the belief which has cheered and guided him. In conclusion, President Dwight spoke feelingly of the long vacation which now opens up before him. He looked back upon his career and found in it more of joy and happiness as the years have gone by. After the close of the sermon President Dwight addressed a valediction in the most solemn and

And now, my fellow-students, and may I not almost say my classmates of the class of '39, let me ask you to rise. The words which I have spoken to you have had a personal meaning. So much of the personal was there in them that they may have seemed more adapted to a friendly conversation than to be presented to you in a large public gathering. But the occasion must be the reason for giving them to you here. I can scarcely find it possible to speak to you in any other way. You with me are leaving the university. You and I go forth together, you the younger brothers, and I the older. But we are all of us going forth into a great and glorious brotherhood. Fifty years separate us in point of graduation, but in this brotherhood that is no separation, for we are all members of a great college home. You stand, indeed, at the end of your college careers, with much faithfulness of spirit, much of energy, and with many pleasant anticipations. But for me the summer day has passed into the late afternoon. For you it is still morning.

I have tried to speak to you of what life teaches and of that loving Father who orders our life's movements for us. I have not told you anything of sorrow and of disappointment. They will meet many of you, and some of you, possibly, many thmes. The costs and the results of them you alone will know. But you will find as the years go by that they are helpful to the upbuilding and to the glorifying of the soul within you, and that the Divine Father if you trust to life undying care, is ever leading you out of darkness into the sumshine of His love. When the clouds of the sumshine of His love. When the clouds of the sumshine of his love. When the clouds of the sumshine of his powe. When the clouds of the sumshine of his love. When the clouds of the sumshine of his love. When the clouds of the sumshine of the father's love, I wish for you to lose every doubt, every questioning fear, every weakness and sin and that your all fe m weakness and sin and that your life may be trand abounding.

And so I bid you farewell. May the long summer day and the sunset hour at the end of it be filled with beautiful light, and may the closing twilight season bear thoughts and hopes of the better and the happier life beyond! May your testimony and mine unite together as it comes from our personal experience in the words of the Fsalmist's song about our loving God and Father who "maketh the outgoings of the morning and the evening to rejoice."

PRESIDENT BRAINERD AT MIDDLEBURY Middlebury, Vt., June 25.-President Brainerd of sermon to-day. He said in part:

have been largely under the control of parents and instructors; hereafter you will be guided chiefly by the dictates of your own wisdom and conscience. We can wish for you nothing better in this parting hour than that, under God's blessing, you may be wise in your day and generation; that with all candor of mind you may seek to know the truth; that laying aside all selfish prejudice, you may see clearly through the coming years the pathway of honor and of duty. So may your lives be a source of good to others, and you yourselves attain to the highest ideals of manhood and womanhood.

DR. FAUNCE'S FAREWELL.

BROWN'S NEW PRESIDENT PREACHES HIS LAST SERMON TO HIS OLD

CONGREGATION.

The Rev. Dr. W. H. P. Faunce preached his last sermon as pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church yesterday morning. For this time of the year there was an exceedingly large congregation present, and many of the women could not suppress the emotion aroused by the knowledge that they were listening to their pastor's closing sermon. Dr. Faunce bade no formal farewell to his congregation. "I have said goodby to no one," he said "There are no farebefore announcing his text. wells for those who are engaged in one cause. We never expect friendships that are true and Christian o be sundered." Dr. Faunce took his text from St. John, x, 9: "By me if any man enter in, he shall be saved." He said that this city to-day profoundly needed two things. Its first need was to have men saved, and its second and far deeper need was to understand Christ's idea of salvation.

"Some of our friends," he said, "have erected a tent in an avenue in this city, where they will prosecute evangelical work the coming summer. Such a work may do a great good, and we say God speed their attempt to arouse the sluggish con-science and the stagnant will. But the deepest eed will not be met by any visiting evangelist. It is not Christ's idea of being saved to arouse our intellect in some public assembly, to sign this or that card and ask for prayers, but it is to come a right realization of God and his fellow-men;

we will know something more about the secret of Christ's peace. To learn how it was that He, who had more cares than we ever dreamed of and who had to redeem a world in thirty-three years, never hastened, never fretted, but went through the world with His own unfailing caim.

What is the noblest kind of life for a man to live? There is no noblest kind of life, but there is a noblest way of living any life. Am I in the world for what I can get out of it? Am I in this city for the purpose of extracting something out of it that will contribute to my ease and comfort? Then I am neither a patriot nor a Christian, and deserve no piace among the noble workers. But am I here to instill something of holiness and high ideals in the social, civic and domestic life? Then I am doing what God is doing. There is a noble way of living the life of the poet, the teacher, the missionary, the manufacturer, the student, the mother and the father. It is not where, but how. Is the work of the missionary at the New Hebrides nobler than the work of Thomas Arnold at Rugby? It is not the burden we carry, but how we carry it. It is not where we stand, but which way we are going, that counts.

Here is Christ's picture of a Christian life: Man shall go in and out, entering ever deeper into the secret of a holy, serene, quiet, spiritual life; ever further into the life of the world, into the "kingdom on earth Thy will be done, as it is in Heaven." Then we shall meet in a place where there shall be no parting and where the long separated shall meet again.

The Fifth Avenue Baptist Church will remain closed until the third Sunday in September. Upon the reopening the pulpit will be occupied each Sun-day by a different preacher until a new pastor is selected.

The Presbytery at its last meeting, acting upon the message from the General Assembly reupon the message from the General Assembly re-garding Professor McGiffert's alleged heretical works, appointed a commission to investigate the charges and to make a report thereon. This com-mission was instructed to report not later than the November meeting, and as nothing further will be done in the matter until after the summer vaca-tion it is not likely that any developments will take place until then. It is to study His will with increasing zeal and make it the law of the home, the church, the place of business and the place of recreation: it is to share and reproduce the victory of Jesus Christ and to feel His inexhaustible and eternal peace."

The preacher said that what people needed was to get into the secret of the peace of Jesus Christ. The religion that gives a man any care or anxiety was not the religion of Jesus Christ. His peace was not that of a stagnant pool or congealed like the Arctic regions, but was like a river steadily flowing onward to the sea. Dr. Faunce then continued:

Christian peace is not weak, flabby or lachrymose. It is not for men who have no power to toil. The peace of Christ means strength beyond all failures and courage beyond all possible alarms. I do not know how we could better employ our leisure this summer than by taking the New Testament to the edge of the seashore and making up our minds that
